

AEROMAGNETIC SURVEY AROUND SYOWA STATION, ANTARCTICA

(1) FLIGHTS NO. 11 - M2 BY JARE-21

Kazuo SHIBUYA

(National Institute of Polar Research, Itabashi-ku, Tokyo 173)

1. Introduction

Japanese Antarctic Research Expedition (JARE) started aeromagnetic surveys from the 8th expedition (JARE-8) by using the proton precession magnetometer. The survey areas and the observation periods from JARE-8 to JARE-19 are summarized in Table 1 of "Catalog of JARE Geodetic Survey Data" (Geographical Survey Institute, 1981). The outline of the survey systems and the obtained total intensity profiles in and around Lützow-Holm Bay are summarized in Tazima et al. (1972) and Kaneko (1976). Though an improved data acquisition system with the digital cassette recorder was introduced since JARE-21, the aeromagnetic surveys by JARE are still in a reconnaissance stage. Because the survey methods and the operations will be improved unceasingly, it is necessary to keep a rather detailed description of the current survey data. It often requires more than 5 years to accomplish the coverage of the area concerned, and the data report will be of great help in the future interpretations and future analyses of probably non-uniform data characteristics. This report gives the total intensity data of 5 flights among 20 flights by JARE-21 together with the corresponding flight logs and diurnal variations. The remaining data will be published successively.

2. Outline of the Survey by JARE-21

Table 1 summarizes the survey flights by JARE-21. Each flight had 1.5-4 flight hours and the total hours amounted to 57 hours. The crew of each flight consisted of three men; one pilot, one navigator and one observer. The operations and logistics of PC-6 were reported by Mizushima et al. (1981). Table 2 summarizes the main characteristics in the aeromagnetic survey. The outline of the aeromagnetic flight planning and the data acquisition system is reviewed in Shibuya and Tanaka (1983).

3. Flight Log

Figure 1 shows the flight lines of the 5 flights (No. 11, No. 12, No. 15, M1 and M2) in this data report. As summarized in Table 2, VLF/omega navigation was not effective and the positioning had to be made only visually. As a result, the point-to-point flight was made by controlling magnetic course, flight speed and flight height above sea level or ground level. Table 3 shows the flight logs for Flights No. 11 - M2. The explanation of the flight log is given by taking Flight No. 11 as an example. The first column is the control point. It is taken usually at the highest point in the small exposed rock areas on the coast and the islands of Lützow-Holm Bay. As for the S-H-Z route of Flights M1 and M2, it is taken at the route station which can easily be distinguished in the air by the oil drums' mark for navigation. The pass time through the control point is considered to have in most cases the uncertainty of about 10 seconds. In Flight No. 11, PC-6 departed from the control point at Benten Island at 1253:10 LT (DEPART) for that at Einstödingen with the magnetic course (MC) of 240°. The distance between the above two points (DIST) was 38.5 nautical miles, which is an approximate value measured on the 1:250,000 topographic sheet of Lützow-Holm Bay. The estimated elapse time (ETE) was 23 minutes by the flight speed of around 100 kn. Then, the estimated time of arrival (ETA) was 1316:10 LT, while the actual time of arrival (ATA) was 1314:40 LT. The difference between ETA and ATA gives the measure of uncertainty in the actual flight speed which was caused by the unknown factors such as wind speed, etc. The succeeding control point can always be seen with the height above sea-ice level (ALT) or above ground level (AGL) of 1500 ft, and the aircraft was in most cases found to come closely over the pointed control point by a continuous adjustment of the heading by the pilot. The degree of the straightness of the flight course is, however, not known quantitatively. The uncertainty in the height control is at most 100 ft - 150 ft. When ATA and DEPART at the same control point give the same clock time, it means that the aircraft passed through the point (with the change of its magnetic course). If they are not equal, it means that the aircraft re-entered the control point after a circular flight.

The location in RMK column for Flight M1 gives VLF/omega positioning. As for Flights M1 and M2, the traces of the oversnow vehicles and the oil drums on the vehicle course for navigation were very helpful for the identification of station names. In order for the pilot to identify the above-mentioned traces, the flight line is slightly offset toward the right-side along the S-H-Z route. As a result, the reverse line of Flight M2 is considered to have a parallel shift of a few kilometers to the upstream direction of the ice sheet as compared with the forward line of Flight M1.

4. Total Intensity Data

The data acquisition system is illustrated in Fig. 2. The clock time and the total intensity value are output sequentially at the rate of sampling time. The acquired data on a digital cassette tape were re-formatted by using HITAC-10II and HITAC-M180 at the National Institute of Polar Research, and they were stored in one volume of open-reel magnetic tape with 20 sequential files. There is no additional edition except re-formatting for the IBM-compatible computer and the raw data of each flight on the cassette tape were transferred to the corresponding file as summarized in Table 4. It is noted that Flight No. 13 was not made and the discordance of the labelled file name with the flight number for Flights M1-M4 is the result of a careless mistake in the editing. Table 5 gives the compiled line-printer output of raw data. The first column shows the sequential data number, and the second to the sixth columns correspond to Flights No. 11 to M2, respectively. The explanation of the raw data is given in Fig. 3, taking the first portion of Flight No. 11 as an example. The clock data is recorded to the digit of one second. Since the sampling rate is not a round number of second, there is a discordant tare in the increment of the clock data.

5. Secular Variation and Diurnal Variations

Figure 4 illustrates the secular variation of the total intensity at Syowa Station which was reproduced from Fig. 4 of Shibuya and Tanaka (1983). The decrease of total intensity is as large as  $-140$  nT/year. Syowa Station is covered with the auroral zone and the diurnal variation of the geomagnetic field is likely to become large with short-period fluctuations. The geomagnetic three components H, D and Z were recorded on a dot-pen analog monitor recorder and on a digital magnetic tape as reported by Katsuta (1981). Figure 5 shows copies of such monitor charts for quick-look of quietness during each aeromagnetic survey flight of Flights No. 11 - M2, where the clock time indicates universal time. Table 6 summarizes the specifications and the file list of the synthesized diurnal variations which cover the flight times of each survey. The copies in Fig. 5 and the synthesized diurnal variations are edited for this report with the courtesy of the World Data Center-C2 for Aurora, National Institute of Polar Research. The print-out of compiled diurnal variations is not given here.
